Over the past 2 years, Canadian immigration has changed significantly; and for a period of time it was changing on a weekly basis. Entry and quarantine requirements finally seemed to settle in for a short term, until November 2021, when new travel requirements were announced, and made effective on January 15, 2022. I will provide insight and information from an immigration perspective on where we started during the pandemic, where we are now, and provide clarification to employers who want to bring foreign workers into Canada, and what is specifically required to enter Canada as of February 2022.
