Increasing Participation and Completion Rates of Online Training

Recorded: Wednesday Feb. 15, 2017

Download Slides Below

Speaker: Natae Bugg, MS, CSP, Senior Manager, Safety Training and Solutions at SafetyNow

A key factor in a successful safety program is worker training. Effective training not only checks the compliance boxes but also reduces injury and incident rates by raising awareness of hazards and safe work practices.

How can you boost your training completion rates, maximize your training efforts and ensure your safety message is getting to the greatest number of workers? This webinar, the third in our four-part series of Managing Your Safety Program in the Cloud, will try to answer those questions as we explore ways to increase training participation and completion.

Join our speaker Natae Bugg as she covers the following topics related to increasing participation and completion rates in online learning:

- Culture
- Accountability
- Community
- Competition
- Interest and Familiarity
- “Be’s” and Carrots

Our final webinar in the series, coming in March, will look at training retention and creating training that sticks.

About Our Speaker:

Natae Bugg is a CSP with almost 17 years of experience in the field of safety and health. She has worked as a safety and training manager in various fields, including construction, telecommunications and biotechnology. She was part of a team that helped launch a company wide online safety training initiative to 26,000 employees as part of her tenure with T-Mobile. She currently works at SafetyNow overseeing the development of training, compliance and reinforcement materials.