About This Webinar

Training is often easy for leadership to question because the value isn’t always presented in business terms. Executives see the budget line, the time away from work, and the administrative effort. They may not see the incidents prevented, the claims reduced, the supervisor decisions improved, the audit questions answered, or the documentation created before a regulator, insurer, or lawyer asks for it.

That’s why year-end is the right time to reframe training. Safety training shouldn’t be positioned as a collection of courses. It should be presented as infrastructure that supports compliance, defensibility, incident prevention, onboarding, supervisor accountability, and operational consistency. The stronger the reporting, the easier it becomes to show leadership what training has done and what the organization should prioritize next.

This SafetyNow ILT webinar will help safety and training leaders prepare an executive training ROI and compliance briefing. We’ll cover the metrics leadership cares about, how to connect training to risk reduction, how LMS records support due diligence, and how to build a 2027 training roadmap that feels strategic, practical, and budget-worthy.
