Sexual Harassment – Landscaping Stats and Facts

FACTS

Key hazards related to sexual harassment in the landscaping industry.

1. Psychological Trauma: Victims of sexual harassment may experience significant psychological trauma, including anxiety, depression, and post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD).
2. Decreased Productivity: Sexual harassment can lead to a toxic work environment, reducing overall productivity. Workers who feel unsafe or uncomfortable are less likely to be engaged and motivated.
3. Increased Turnover: High levels of sexual harassment in the workplace can lead to increased employee turnover, as victims may choose to leave the job to escape the hostile environment.
4. Legal and Financial Risks: Employers in the landscaping industry may face legal and financial consequences if they fail to address sexual harassment claims.
5. Safety Hazards Due to Distraction: Workers who are dealing with the stress and distraction caused by sexual harassment are more likely to be involved in workplace accidents.
6. Impact on Team Dynamics: Sexual harassment can create a divisive work environment, leading to conflicts among team members. This can erode trust and cooperation.
7. Health-Related Issues: The stress and anxiety resulting from sexual harassment can lead to physical health problems, such as headaches, gastrointestinal issues, and sleep disturbances.

STATS

- A survey indicated that 30% of Canadian respondents reported experiencing sexual harassment in the workplace within the past two years.
- The Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) has noted that over 80% of complaints filed in certain industries are from female employees, emphasizing the vulnerability of women.
- Studies indicate that victims of workplace sexual harassment are more likely to suffer from anxiety, depression, and PTSD. According to a survey by the Canadian Labour Congress, about 1 in 5 women have experienced sexual harassment at work, leading to significant mental health impacts.

- According to various studies, 81% of women in the USA reported experiencing some form of sexual harassment in their lifetime. This statistic highlights the widespread nature of the issue across different workplaces, including landscaping.
- A 2016 report by the U.S. Merit Systems Protection Board found that approximately 25% of workers who experienced sexual harassment left their jobs within two years. These dynamics can also affect the landscaping industry, where high turnover can disrupt team cohesion and increase operational costs.
