Training Requirements in OSHA Standards and Training Guidelines

Retrieved from: Occupational Safety & Health Administration

The Occupational Safety and Health Administration has developed voluntary training guidelines to assist employers in providing the safety and health information and instruction needed for their employees to work at minimal risk to themselves, to fellow employees, and to the public.
The guidelines are designed to help employers to (1) determine whether a worksite problem can be solved by training; (2) determine what training, if any, is needed; (3) identify goals and objectives for the training; (4) design learning activities; (5) conduct training; (6) determine the effectiveness of the training; and (7) revise the training program based on feedback from employees, supervisors, and others.

https://www.osha.gov/Publications/osha2254.pdf