Workplace Violence Training Program: Safety Talk Scripts

INSTRUCTIONS

Training and educating workers about workplace violence is one of the keys to preventing it. Here’s are nine unique and effective training scripts you can use to deliver important lessons about workplace violence to different personnel at your organization consisting of:

- Pointers to help the trainer prepare the presentation.
- A real-life fatality report about a worker killed in a violent attack to capture trainees’ attention.
- A Safety Talk, or script that the trainer can use to deliver training.

Tips to Prepare for Training Sessions

While preparing to deliver these Safety Talks:

- Carefully review your company’s workplace violence policy focusing on the procedures and protocols for reporting incidents and threats of violence.
- Come up with one or two scenarios that your trainees can act out as part of a simulation exercise illustrating how to call for help in violent situation.
- Identify the equipment your company provides for workers to summon help in the event of an emergency, such as special phones, silent alarms, etc.
- Verify that your company has conspicuously posted emergency contact numbers and information throughout the workplace.

You can find more resources on workplace violence via SafetyNow, and participate in our eLearning courses to ensure you are fully compliant and prepared for the worst case scenario.

Domestic Violence Training Script
Bullying Training Script
Calling 911 Training Script

Bomb Threats & Terrorism Training Script
Robbery Training Script
Road Rage Training Script
General Workplace Violence Prevention Training Script
Receptionist Safety Training Script
Working Alone Training Script